CORTELYOU SAYS CAN'T NAME BANKS

Testifies in Money Probe Case—Gives But Little Information.

New York, N. Y., June 12.—George R. Cortelyou, secretary of the treasury under Roosevelt, was called to the stand today at the hearing of the Pujo committee investigation, the so called money trust to tell the manner in which the government deposited $25,000,000 in the New York National banks to help stem the panic of 1910.

Mr. Cortelyou said he did not remember the names of the banks in which money was deposited.

After inquiring into the general situation, he promised that the government would aid in a general way. The next evening, he said, another conference was held. He was not sure that Mr. Morgan was present then.

At the conference, the witness said, Morgan promised $25,000,000 for distribution among the banks.

"At the first conference," he explained, "I stated that I would not deposit a dollar except for the relief of the country generally and the commercial community generally."

"Was there anything said as to where these funds should be deposited—with what banks?"

"I don't recall."

Untermeyer asked the witness if anything was said about the high rate of call money and the effect on the stock exchange of the failure to get money here. Mr. Cortelyou started to give an explanation and was asked sharply to reply to the question.

"You know," Mr. Untermeyer said, "there are questions I cannot answer yes or no without doing myself an injustice. I have a right to make an explanation of my position and I propose to exercise that right."

This brought forth cheers from the brokers and bankers looking on and a declaration from chairman Pujo that he would have ejected anyone repeating it.

Mr. Cortelyou said he "probably did have such a declaration," but could not recall the details.

Mr. Cortelyou upon being pressed for a list of the banks in which the $25,000,000 was deposited, finally referred to Mr. Untermeyer to the records of the treasury department.

"I only remember," he said, "that the money was deposited in national banks. I could not undertake to say which ones."

Mr. Cortelyou said he "understood that the money was used on the stock exchange, but did not know that the whole amount was lent for that purpose."

"What interest did Mr. Morgan have in the deal? He was not a president of a bank, was he?"

Morgan Represented Own Interests.

"No, but the general opinion placed him as the leader at the moment and I suppose he represented some of his own interests," said Mr. Cortelyou.

"Don't you know that the banks under Mr. Morgan's guidance lent the money on the stock exchange in proportion to the amounts they received from it?"

$42,000,000 Deposited.

"I do not."

Mr. Cortelyou said he deposited altogether $42,000,000 in New York within three or four days, of which $10,000,000 went to relieve the trust companies.

"Did you know there was an arrangement among these trust companies providing that Mr. Morgan should have the distribution of this money?"

Mr. Cortelyou said he thought the clearing house committee had this matter in charge but he contended that Mr. Morgan was "captain general" of the situation and that everybody looked to him for guidance.

WILL TURN CATTLE OVER TO THE CONSUL

Juarez Officials Refuse to Permit Cattle to Be Delivered to El Paso.

Cars of Chihuahua cattle have been refused by the Juarez authorities, local cattlemen say. The trouble has arisen over the exportation of a large number of Terrazas cattle to El Paso recently.

As the importers are to pay $3.50 per head for duty and freight on the cattle they refuse to pay any additional charges to get the cattle out of Juarez. The freight and duty payments are all made at Chihuahua and this is believed to be the reason why the cattle cars were refused in Juarez, as the Juarez officials were not in on the deal. There are now 32,000 head of Terrazas cattle in Chihuahua which have been sold to Americans and which will be brought out as soon as they can be loaded and brought to Juarez. As they have been purchased by the Americans through local brokers, they will be delivered to the American consul in Juarez.

FEDERALS QUIT TOWN OF MADERA

timber town. The federals are supposed to have joined the federal command which has been operating in that vicinity.

REBELS DEMAND THE SURRENDER OF TOWNS

Arms Shipped to Garibaldi Are Still Held in Douglas, Ariz.

Douglas, Ariz., June 12.—A large force of rebels have demanded the surrender of Navajo and Esanaco, lying east of El Turco, according to Zeterino Blas, a well known mining man, who left the Turco camp riding horseback into Esanaco. He says that a courier arrived in camp from the river towns, stating that the rebels had arrived in Esanaco and were on their way to take these two pueblos. The inhabitants were not excited over their coming as there is a force of federal soldiers in the immediate vicinity numbering about 200 men, and other troops were expected daily.

Senor Blas said that H. L. Nix, the Turco store manager, had not yet returned from Oputa, where he was taken last week to answer the charges that were brought against him by former comisario Leon. Nix was expected to return last Tuesday, and Turco people are at a loss to understand the reason for his continued absence.

Isidro Escobedo has again made his appearance. This time it is in the neighborhood of Bacarduchil, west of Mocoma. He with his party passed through the ranch of R. C. Wilson, near the Con-Virgin mine. They appropriated ten horses and killed sufficient beef for their band.

Mr. Wilson passed through Douglas to make his complaint to the Mexican government. The last seen of Escobedo and his bunch, they were going to the direction of the Chihuahua line. Doubts have been expressed in some quarters that Escobedo has been in Sonora recently, but Mr. Wilson is personally acquainted with him and says that he is not mistaken in his identity.

The arms and ammunition, which arrived in Douglas consigned to Mexican consul Cuesta, for services across the line still remain on the American side. Strenuous efforts have been made by the federal garrison across the line, if is said to secure possession of the munitions of war, but met with no success. Many surprises are being made as to the retention of the rifles and cartridges on this side. One of these is, that the recent clash in authority between vice governor Gayon and Governor Garibaldi, which resulted in the revocation of the commission of the latter, is directly responsible. The arms were originally asked for by president Madero to equip the troops to be raised and commanded by Garibaldi in Sonora. The crossing of the arms to be under his direction. It now seems that Garibaldi is endeavoring to hold these supplies of war on this side as long as possible in order to embarrass the federals in Agua Prieta.

YAQUIS KILLED BY TRAIN CREW

Tucson, Ariz., June 12.—In a battle with the crew of a work train between Limones and Portero, Sonora, yesterday eight Yaquis were killed and many wounded of a band of 100. Conductor J. Jackson and crew repulsed the attack and, though the train was badly shot up, the crew escaped without injury. In their retreat the Yaquis destroyed the telegraph line and burned a bridge.

Railroad officials have asked permission of the governor of Sonora to send out pilot trains to fight the Yaquis.

FEDERAL BUILDING BECOMES ARSENAL OF SEIZED AMMUNITION

Third floor, federal building, resembles a United States arsenal, these troublesome times of war in Mexico and embargo on ammunition being taken to Chihuahua. As rapidly as the ammunition is taken from the Mexican smugglers, it is carted to the federal building, where it is stored to await final disposition by the government.

In the United States commissioner's office there is a steel vault filled with 20-30 rifle cartridges, rifles, revolvers and assorted small arms. These were taken from border runners soon after the embargo was declared. Across the hall, in the office of the department of justice, are six trunks containing 25,000 rounds of ammunition, shipped here from New Orleans and seized at the union station. In the United States marshal's office, on the same floor of the federal building, are boxes of ammunition in the original packages, taken possession of by Capt. J. H. Rogers, deputy United States marshal. In addition to these supplies, there are 50,000 rounds of rifle ammunition and 200 rifles stored at Fort Bliss, which were seized in a local store by government officers.

This supply of ammunition, which now totals more than 150,000 rounds and 500 rifles, is constantly being added to.

DAVID DE LA FUENTE COMES FROM THE FRONT

David de la Fuente, artillery commander in the rebel ranks and one of the leading members of the revolt against the Mexican government, has arrived in Juarez. His visit to Juarez is said to be simply for the purpose of rest.

Fuente, who was formerly a prominent army officer in the Mexican government, was injured by the explosion of a shell in one of the earlier battles of the revolution. As a result, one arm was amputated.

A battle at La Herradura, Durango, 70 miles southwest of Torreon, is said to have resulted in the defeat of the rebels.
